A Felton Institute Justice Services Program

WHAT IS C2H?

Felton Institute's Crossroads to Hope (C2H) is an innovative residential transitional housing program located in Santa Rosa, Sonoma County.

C2H provides 6-month housing residencies, onsite case management services and programming for individuals with justice-involved and mental health backgrounds. It is designed to help stabilize a person's living situation while also providing supportive services onsite.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE?

Residents are pre-screened and identified through Sonoma County's Mental Health Diversion program using an intensive evaluation to determine their needs. The assessment includes a violence risk review to ensure public safety.

OUR SERVICES

-  Learning Recovery and Wellness Strategies
-  Developing Independent Living Skills
-  Building a Support Network
-  Accessing Community Resources
-  Establishing Long-Term Stable Housing

HOW DOES C2H SUPPORT RESIDENTS?

The aim of C2H is to help residents build a support network, access community resources, and establish long-term stable housing. The peer-led client centered program strives to provide a safe, understanding, and encouraging space.

Our staff are committed to providing personalized support and guidance. We believe in creating an atmosphere that encourages growth. We recognize that everyone has different needs and goals, and we are here to help facilitate those goals. Peer Providers led by a Program Manager will staff the program 24 hours per day, seven days per week.

WHO IS INVOLVED IN THE PROJECT?

The Crossroads to Hope (C2H) housing program is a collaboration between Felton Institute and the Sonoma County Department of Health Services. It is funded by the California Health Facilities Finance Agency (CHFFA) and the Mental Health Services Act (Prop63/MHSA).
